FIRE ACTIVITY:

The Dollar Lake Fire is currently 13,449 acres and 8% containment.

Firefighters took advantage of a break in the weather yesterday to secure problem areas on the south and east sides of the fire, including around campgrounds, outfitter camps, and around the Red Cliff Bible Camp. Crews also continued to build containment and contingency lines, especially on the south side of the fire area. The structure protection group also had a productive day, with potential fuels such as tree limbs and brush removed, buildings wrapped, and sprinkler lays set up.

Today's weather will briefly increase fuel moistures, which will lead to fire behavior decreasing. However, fuels will continue to smolder and burn; the rain will not put the fire out. Areas on the west and south sides of the fire are prepped and ready for burnout operations if conditions become favorable.

WEATHER:

Wednesday will see rain coverage increase across the area, and a wetting rain is expected over the fire. This will keep humidity elevated above 60 percent, with temperatures cooler below 60 degrees. More of the same is expected Thursday. In total, 0.75 inches to 1.25 inches of rain are possible over the fire, though accumulations are expected to vary greatly across the area. Gusty outflow winds and lightning are still a threat. Rain chances decrease by the weekend with warmer and drier conditions building back in.
