Localized areas of turbulent wind exist throughout the Shoshone National Forest and on adjacent lands. Always be alert to approaching weather systems and pay attention to local topography which influences weather, especially those features which channel winds.